

Project Team Relationships

summary

For every project we undertake, we approach it as a team. The main relationships in that team include the owner, the construction manager, and the architect. The owner is you, our client. The selected builder who provides subcontractors for construction is the construction manager. AMDG is the architect. AMDG works with a team of green-conscious consultants who contribute to each successful green building design. To balance these relationships, AMDG consistently works to promote clear and regular communication among all team members.
